

The Queen Must Die – David Farr

Three months we've been thinking about this. Three months of precise planning. And now Les is busy. What would have happened to the French Revolution if the night before Danton had told Robespierre 'sorry, I'm busy'. There would have been no French Revolution, that's what.

France would be like England, ruled by a sovereign no one has voted for, responsible to no one, accountable to no one, supported by centuries of privilege and living in five massive palaces for no reason that anyone can understand. You know what? Les did this on the anti-globalisation march as well. Remember what he said when he found it was Macdonalds we were protesting against? 'I like the apple pies'. That's not the point, is it?
